

Rachel & Sean

Gown // Karen Willis Holmes Couture

Bouquet // Debbie O'Neill Florist

Transport // Triple R

Reception and ceremony venue // Stones of the Yarra Valley

After party // Fad Gallery

Photography // Gazi Photography

Rachel met Sean when he answered an ad to house share with some of her friends in London over five years ago. As it has been said, music is the glue that brings us all together and this is exactly what happened in Rachel and Sean's case. As housemates over a period of time, their friendship had underlying romantic tones which came to light at the Glastonbury Music Festival.

During a year-long engagement, Rachel planned most of the wedding details although it wasn't particularly difficult seeing she had already envisaged it for years. Rachel's mum baked the wedding cake which was made from little cupcakes, lifting the green from her gorgeous Karen Willis Holmes gown to tie in with the theme.

The ceremony begun mid-morning and although showing up late wasn't part of the plan, everything went off without a hitch. After the morning ceremony and a lunchtime reception filled with improv dances, it was time to bid the bridal party farewell, as they lifted off in helicopters to their next rendezvous, the Fad Gallery where they danced the night away.

The entire events of the special day unfolded perfectly, and memories were created to last a lifetime.

